Tuesday P.M.

March 24th. 96.

Dearest,

This is my no letter day - How happy I am - to think of you starting tonight - by now you are off double-quick, and tomorrow morning, or possibly tonight, you will be greeted by my welcome to Dixon

Had another letter from Frank I shall go and stay over Sunday with them. I take the 3 o'clock train in the afternoon of Saturday. I had such a good lesson today, daily lessons are with a deal more to me. It was my usual course by far. To condense them into a shorter time.

Well, dearest, I don't seem to have anything to tell you — I am reading "Arthur Bonnycastle," I wish you could manage to read it at the same time. This is almost as helpful a book as our "John". This is by Dr. J. G. Holland.

Remember, darling, that I am with you in spirit every moment and tell your kind aunt and Uncle that I send them a greeting and a hand clasp. Your loving Sunshine.
